Presentation Category	Miscellaneous Topics
Presentation Title	Transforming Behaviors - How Not to be Part of a Crime Scene
Presentation Length	Available in either 60 or 120 Minutes
Presentation Objective	Upon completion of this course, participants will have acquired skills that are essential in incorporating training and safety measures in situations where officers tend to be complacent or distracted. The course serves as an excellent reminder of the dangers of inattention to potential threats and offers excellent opportunities to teach specific, potentially lifesaving behaviors in response to those threats.
Presentation Description	The brazen attacks on members of today's law enforcement community are unprecedented. In a time of increased violence, officer safety and back-to-basics training initiatives are paramount. This course highlights actual incidents of deadly and potentially deadly situations that serve as valuable training tools for officer survival. Hear stories from officers who were in the fight of their lives and the factors that contributed to their survival. Designed for all sworn law enforcement professionals, learn from officers who were in the fight of their lives, and the key factors that helped them survive. Note: This course is designed to be accurate and authoritative with regard to the subject matter and provides factual information on actual cases of violent crime. Simulations of violent activity and/or behavior that may occur in situations are also included. What We Teach: 1. Lessons from the Wall 2. Deadly controlled training exercises

	3. Violent encounters facing today's law enforcement community. (Where it all began) 4. The importance of training and performing a "gut check" during every encounter. Discussion points include: • Since when do people with mental illness not pose a threat? • Taser vs Firearm vs Taser • Training and agency policy • Teachable Moments • Time/Distance/Back-
